A BIBLIOGRAPHY OF GEORGE M. WRONG

George McKinnon Wrong (1860-1948) was one of the most significant figures in the development of both the study and the profession of history in Canada. He grew up near Port Burwell and Vienna, Ontario, then a hot bed of evangelical fervour, and entered Wycliffe College in 1879. After graduating in both arts and theology, which he took concurrently, he joined the faculty of Wycliffe. During the next nine years he taught church history, apologetics and liturgics; he also continued his own studies, learning several languages and spending at least two summers studying in Germany and England. After the death of Sir Daniel Wilson in 1892 Wrong was appointed lecturer in history at the University of Toronto.

In 1894 Wrong became Professor of History, a position he held until 1927. As head of the department he brought to Toronto many young graduates of Oxford. Together they altered the Department of History, bringing about such changes as: the teaching of Canadian history; instruction in small groups, based on the Oxford Tutorial system; program options of English and History, and Classics and History; the Historical Club; and, in the 1920's, a mature program of graduate studies. Many of the traditions begun under Wrong are cherished still at Toronto and at other universities. The list of historians who learned something of the breadth and the art of history from Wrong's department includes: George Brown, A.L. Burt, J.B. Brebner, C.N. Cochrane, D.G. Creighton, G.P. De T. Glazebrook, A.R.M. Lower, E.W. McNinnis, D.J. McDougall, C.W. New, W.N. Sage, F.H. Soward, F.H. Underhill, and W.S. Wallace.

Wrong was one of several men who stimulated and presided over the growth of the historical profession in Canada. In addition to expanding the undergraduate and graduate program, Wrong helped establish the Champlain Society, and was the founder of the Review of Historical Publications Relating to Canada, which became the Canadian Historical Review. Wrong also worked with a variety of advisory committees which ensured the existence and growth of the Public Archives. Wrong and his colleagues wrote textbooks that were used in every province in Canada, and Wrong's own monographs and popular history series stimulated public interest in Canadian history.

As the son-in-law of Edward Blake, Wrong had the ear of many significant people. He used these contacts, and was used by them, to foster a number of political and social movements. Wrong worked particularly hard to improve Canada's relations with England (Round Table Movement), to encourage better relations and understanding between French and English Canada, and to reduce anti-British opinion in the United States. He also was an active supporter of Anglican schools such as Havergal and Bishop Ridley; social institutions such as Ketchum Hall, the Grenfell Mission, the Ontario Red Cross; and political groups such as the Canadian Institute for International Affairs, and the League of Nations Society. He corresponded with political leaders, public figures and historians all over North America and Europe, and he was in constant demand as a speaker. His bibliography indicates the extent of his teachings.

For a more complete description of the life of Wrong see the author's PhD dissertation "And Gladly Teach: G.M. Wrong and the Department of History at the University of Toronto". (Michigan State, 1977); the PhD thesis by Alan Bowker mentioned below; and W.S. Wallace, "The Life and Work of George M. Wrong" Canadian Historical Review 29 (September 1948) 229-37.

In addition to the published works of George Wrong this bibliography contains references to addresses he made, to editorial comments on his statements, and to some unpublished but dated essays. These latter items were included because they provided a clue to what concerned Wrong at a particular time and because at least two were presented to radio audiences.

The material is listed chronologically. Within each year the first items are books written or edited by Wrong, followed by other items for which only the year of publication was available. Then come articles, reviews, addresses and letters-to-editors, intermingled chronologically. Some addresses were published, or were presented several times; where this occurs all items are listed under the earliest date. Editorial or individual responses to Wrong are placed with the item to which they refer; occasionally an article about Wrong appears by itself.

The material here was drawn from several sources. "A Bibliography of the Works of George M. Wrong" compiled by Katherine Wales and E. M. Murray (Canadian Historical Review 29 (September 1948) 238-9) lists books and some articles. An earlier version by E. M. Murray, "A Bibliography of the Works of George MacKinnon Wrong" (1938) is available at the University of Toronto Library School; it contains references to reviews of Wrong's books and to the printing history of a few books and pamphlets. Alan Bowker has an extensive list of works by and about Wrong and some of his contemporaries in "Truly Useful Men: Maurice Hutton, George Wrong, James Mavor and the University of Toronto, 1880-1927" (unpublished PhD thesis, University of Toronto, 1975). Indexes and catalogues in the Canadian Historical Review, the American Historical Review, The New York Times, the National Library in Ottawa and libraries in Toronto were also used to locate Wrong's work. Newspaper clippings (Biographical File, University of Toronto Archives) provided most of the information regarding addresses and editorial reactions. It should be pointed out that about a dozen of these were not verified; this might be the result of mislabelling or of microfilming a different edition than the one from which the clipping was taken. The reader should also be aware that no attempt was made to search all newspapers for accounts of Wrong's addresses. The University of Toronto Archives also has, in the Department of Extension Geographical File, a list of lectures delivered in various Ontario cities. Other addresses were located in the Wrong Papers held by the University of Toronto, Department of Rare Books and Special Collections. Many references to Wrong's addresses, articles, and letters-to-editors were found in the correspondence of his friends in the University of Toronto Library, the Public Archives of Canada, the Library of Congress, and letters in the possession of his daughter, Mrs. C.H.A. Armstrong of Toronto.

All of the items listed here have been verified, except where otherwise indicated. Unverified material falls into three categories. First are those items which I have not seen but have no reason to doubt; these are arranged in chronological sequence with other items and are enclosed in square brackets. Second are items such as addresses or articles which are mentioned fairly specifically in a letter or some other source, but for which no additional corroboration was available; these are identified as unverified, and are placed at the end of the appropriate year. Third are items which I felt could not be included here at all; these include references which were too vague to be located, and the references in the biographical file in the University Archives which could not be verified.

Much had to be omitted from this bibliography: unpublished material, such as essays and diaries in the University of Toronto Library and in the possession of Mrs. Armstrong; and unsigned material, such as anonymous reviews in the Review of Historical Publications Relating to Canada. Some material is known to exist but was not located, such as addresses to Canadian Clubs in cities outside of Toronto, and articles in Parish and Home, for which only a few volumes were available in the Anglican Church Archives and the New York Public Library. Another area of omission is biographical data such as service on editorial boards, eulogies, minor notices in newspapers, and reviews of Wrong's books.

In the preparation of this bibliography I was greatly assisted by previous collections, by librarians and archivists all across Canada and in England and the United States. In particular I would like to thank Mrs. C. H. A. Armstrong; Dr. Alan Bowker; Dr. T. R. Millman, Wycliffe College; Dr. Norman Penlington, East Lansing, Michigan; and Mr. Andy Birrell, Ottawa. The staff in the Archives, Reference Room and Microfilm Room of the University of Toronto Library were exceptionally helpful and patient.

It would be appreciated very much if any errors or omissions in this bibliography could be brought to the attention of the Archivist, University of Toronto Library.
